

Individual Tuition

Some people are so short of time, or have such pressing needs, that they need Individual English Tuition. Others simply prefer the opportunity to concentrate on their own priority areas. Who is it for?

There is no 'typical' person who chooses individual English tuition. Some feel a group course is simply not suitable; others have limited time available; and still others want the trainer to be able to focus 100 per cent on their needs. A programme of individual tuition recognises that everyone is different, so the training content is entirely flexible to suit you.

Course Content

Some people have identified an area of very specific needs and require totally personalised and focused training which a group course may not be able to provide.

People choosing to take individual tuition choose to do so for a wide variety of reasons which can include:

- ▶ Preparation for an important presentation
- ▶ Increasing confidence for an English-language conference, seminar or meeting
- ▶ Priority focus on specific areas of weakness or of interest
- ▶ Increasing overall level of confidence in all aspects of English language use
- ▶ Preparing for a specific exam
- ▶ A need to ensure total focus on personal needs

All our individual tuition programmes include a detailed needs analysis leading to a carefully tailored training programme ensuring that we maintain complete focus on specifically identified areas of need.

Many people choose to do a combination course, where half a day is spent in group tuition, whilst the other half is spent in 1:1 tuition. You may also choose to take your individual tuition with a colleague – making it a 2:1 course.
